

BIG DONATION FOR CAMPAIGN

New York Life Contributed Some Forty-Eight Thousand To Republican Fund.

SOUGHT TO PROTECT ITS ASSETS

Executive Officials Heard That Policy Holders Would Be Heavy Losers If Roosevelt Was Defeated.

New York, Sept. 16.—Vice-President George W. Perkins of the New York Life gave the Armstrong legislative committee sensational inside data concerning the company's financial methods.

He frankly admitted that an entry of $48,702 in a ledger marked "ordered paid by the president" represented a contribution to the Republican campaign fund last year. He added that similar donations were made in 1900 and in 1896. He acknowledged that this expenditure never was brought to the attention of the finance committee, but was a "purely executive action," determined upon because it was considered "for the best interests of the policy holders," and because it was believed that their assets would be endangered by Democratic success.

Aids to Evade Law.

Mr. Perkins was asked concerning his dual relations as second executive of the New York Life and as a member of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., through which the insurance company does much of its business. He declared that neither connection influenced his judgment in any capacity.

Asked about the syndicate action by which $800,000 in bonds was sold on Dec. 31, 1901, to J. P. Morgan & Co., and bought back on Jan. 2, 1902, he insisted that the transaction was regular, and that the resulting loss of $80,000 was the best the insurance company could do under the circumstances. After much circumlocution he was forced to admit that the real purpose of the proceeding was to have the books read $3,200,000 instead of $4,000,000 at the time the commission of insurance received a report concerning the New York Life's assets.

Money for Campaign Fund.

The disclosures concerning the big contribution to the Republican campaign fund came as a climax after a day replete with revelations. Mr. Perkins' admissions were in the nature of a bomb among the mob of spectators, who crowded the committee's quarters to their capacity. Standing room was at a premium, and every

WATCH BODIES ROASTING IN THE FIERY FURNACE

Crowds in a Connecticut Hamlet Are Wit- nesses To A Growsome Sight--- Seven Dead.

Avon, Conn., Sept. 16.—Seven persons, employees of the Climax Fuse company, were burned to death in a fire here Friday which followed the explosion of a fuse. Eleven others were injured by burns or crushed in the panic, and several of them will doubtless die. Most of the casualties are attributed to the panic which ensued.

As there is no fire department in the village, there was no way of coping with the flames, which soon spread rapidly, and in less than an hour after the explosion occurred those who were unable to escape were in the clutches of a fire that eventually burned their bodies to ashes. As the day wore on the great crowd that collected in the hamlet saw the bodies of men and women roasting in the fire and were powerless to check the flames.

Exact Cause Is Unknown.

The exact cause of the accident may never be known, but it is the accepted theory here that in an effort to burn out a stoppage in one of the machines a workman caused an explosion of a fuse, with the hot iron he held in his hand. Those who were in the room where the explosion occurred say that the explosion was not severe, and ordinarily would not have caused a panic. Inflamable material, however, was set on fire and in a few minutes the room was a mass of flames. In an instant there was a mad rush for the doors and windows, and during the scramble many were pushed back into the building, while others were severely burned.

BUILDING TRADES DO NOT LIKE THE ORDER

Object to the Starting of Trade Agreements Beginning January First.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

New York, Sept. 16.—A convention of delegates from all the unions, opened here today under the direction of the Associated Building Trades. The chief purpose of the meeting is to consider the new plan of the employers' association, which trade agreements as to wages and conditions begin on January 1 instead of May 1. The reason given by the employers for desiring to make the change is that it will help them in making estimates for the season. Many of the unions hold on the other hand, that as there is little or no work in the winter months, they will be at the mercy of employers if the date is changed.

FIGHT FOR MAYOR IS WAXING MUCH HOTTER

The Struggle in New York is for or Against Tammany as Usual.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

New York, Sept. 16.—Politicians all over the country are watching with interest the preliminary movements in the New York mayoralty campaign, which will be at their hottest next week. It will be the most interesting campaign of the fall, eclipsing the state contests, for that is an ordinary governorship fight compared to a struggle for the control of Greater New York. The fact that municipal ownership may also enter into the campaign lends additional interest. The Citizens' Union is sorely disappointed over the determination of District Attorney Jerome not to accept the nomination, but the names of the men mentioned are sufficient guarantee that a strong man can be selected to head the ticket against Tammany. In the meantime the Wiswam is said to be worried over the prospect of the campaign, especially if it is based on municipal ownership. Charles E. Hughes, counsel for the New York legislative committee on insurance, and Recorder Coff are the names most frequently mentioned as men who will be named.

Mr. Hill came to St. Paul from Guelph, Ontario, forty-one years ago and was "mud clerk" on a small steamboat plying on the Mississippi, Minnesota and Red Rivers. The term "mud clerk" is applied to second clerks, those who check freight in and out at landings along the river. He got several freight contracts and later obtained an interest in the steamboat line on which he had been employed, that acquisition being the beginning of his vast holdings which made him a power in the railroad world.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Indianapolis, Sept. 16.—"I loaned Gov. Hanly $750 and he must have known it was state funds."

This is David E. Sherrick's retort on the governor, who peremptorily removed him as state auditor. Sherrick, charged with embezzlement, was arrested at his home.

The $15,000 bail Judge Walton demanded was furnished by fourteen of Sherrick's friends and a trust company. Sherrick is defiant. He said: "I loaned Gov. Hanly $750 with which to make his race for governor, and it was state funds. He was quite willing to accept an accommodation from me then, and he must have known at the time that it was state money he was using."

"It is not the only favor I have done him at his solicitation in times past. But Gov. Hanly has proven that he can cheerfully sacrifice the men who have benefited him when all he can possibly gain is a little cheap notoriety."

Says Hanly Is Ingrate.

Sherrick made this statement in the presence of County Auditor Cyrus J. Clark, W. S. Wickard, Floyd Woods and several other friends who had gathered at his home to help him. Sherrick added, bitterly: "I had provided to repay every cent, as I promised. All the state officers who handle state funds were given until Oct. 4 to make their reports. I, of all of them, was singled out and told that I must have my report in by Sept. 15. 'Mr. Hanly will be shown his mistake. LOCATE CASHIER IN N. Y. ASYLUM

Former Official of Kansas Fiscal Institution Is Found by Detectives for Insurance Company.

Niles, Mich., Sept. 16.—A search begun seven years ago by detectives employed by the New York Life insurance company for George A. Kimmel, who disappeared on July 30, 1898, from Arkansas City, Kan., where he had been cashier of the Farmers' State bank, is said to have resulted in the discovery of Kimmel in an asylum near New York city, where it is claimed he was confined several years ago.

A. G. Bacon of St. Louis, Mo., who has been retained as attorney by Mrs. Edna K. Bensieff, sister of Kimmel, the sole beneficiary of Kimmel's life insurance policy of $25,000, has been notified of Kimmel's location and has sent relatives to New York to establish the identity of the missing man.

The establishing of the identity of the man Kimmel may clear up a mystery connected with the supposed defalcation of $50,000 from the First National bank of Niles by Charles A. Johnson, an uncle of Kimmel, who was cashier of the latter bank when that institution failed in 1901. It is alleged Johnson used Kimmel as a cat's paw and that the latter fled to avoid arrest.

DUNN TELLS OF HIS NEW BALLOT

SUBJECT OF REFERENDUM AT SPRING ELECTION

IS A RADICAL DEPARTURE

From the Present Form of Blanket Sheet, and Janesville Visitor Claims Many Advantages for It.

At the judicial election next spring the matter of the adoption of a new form of ballot, which is a distinct departure from anything heretofore used in any country where the suffrage exists, will be submitted to the voters of Wisconsin, the legislature having authorized the referendum at its last session. Monrovia Dunn of Marshfield who devised the ingenious substitute for the old blanket sheet was a visitor at the Gazette office last evening, and his explanation of the working and advantages of his invention proved very interesting. In the first place, the offices which are to be filled are numbered as well as designated in the usual manner, and together with the names of the candidates, appear in two rows on vari-colored and perforated sheets of cardboard known to the trade as "bogus-bristol." These sheets are bound together by a rivet and surface space is so successfully economized that they measure something less than six by nine inches. Each party has its distinctive hue in the cardboard collection. Republican ballots are orange tinted; democratic, blue; prohibition, green; social democratic, pale yellow; independent, white. The perforations are so arranged that a ticket can be split with very little trouble.

The "pocket-envelope," where the voter is not a hidebound party man is to assemble his ballot, is a rack of stiff paper, with each separate compartment numbered and designated with the names of the offices to correspond with any one of the ballots, names of candidates, of course, being omitted. It must be folded and the flap sealed before it can be cast. The remnants of the mutilated ballots must be returned to the larger envelope in which they were originally handed to the voter, and this also must be sealed and turned in, as it is to constitute a check on the validity of the vote, should any question arise. Allowance is made for carelessness. If a straight, one-color ballot is placed in the "pocket-envelope" and then, as if by accident, small sections of other ballots are torn out and enclosed therewith, the evident intention of the voter to split his ticket and favor the particular individuals whose names appear on the little diverse-colored sections, will be recognized.

Advantages claimed for this form of ballot are principally three. In the first place they can be counted more than five times as fast as the old ballots. The clerk merely glances over a badly split specimen and reads off the colors and numbers. Ten seconds suffice for the worst combination in the split-ticket line that can be conceived. In the second place the numbers make it possible for the most illiterate to intelligently split their tickets if they so desire. John Jones, the democratic candidate for a given office who happens to have enlisted Voter Chetread's republican sympathy has already told him that "he is No. 17 on the blue" and all Mr. Chetread has to do is to tear out the little section described and place it in the numbered pocket of the voting envelope. In this connection, Mr. Dunn observes that even the most ignorant colored man of the south shoots craps and knows numbers when he sees them.

Thirdly, all possibility of fraud along any of the lines thus far discovered, is eliminated. The endless chain racket by which the foxy voter has circumvented the supposed impregnable defenses of the Australian ballot—sending the first man of his squad into the booth with a stolen blank bearing the forged signatures of the election-clerks and marked with an indelible lead pencil to suit his wishes, and demanding of this man that he bring back as a receipt showing "goods delivered" the honest blank handed him by the clerks, before the money payment should be forthcoming—this kind of a game is made impossible because there can be no receipt. Both the ballot to be cast and the remnants not cast must be turned in and the envelopes sealed in the presence of the election officers. The vote-buyer may operate his squad with "fixed" ballots, as heretofore, but he must run his chances on their remaining "fixed." The necessity of the corresponding full-remainder in the other envelope makes it impossible for him to arrange a ticket that cannot be changed and just the possibility of this "match-back" is relied upon to obviate the necessity of actually making it in the count under ordinary circumstances.

If the ballot is adopted in Wisconsin Mr. Dunn hopes to introduce it in other states of the union and foreign countries. It appears to have all the advantages claimed for it and the concern which will manufacture it expects to put the combination of envelopes and cardboard sheets on the market for something like $4.50 a thousand. In places where voting machines are in use it will not be used, the referendum stipulating that in case of adoption it is only to supplant the old blanket ballots. However, it is not at all unlikely that the new device may prevent the introduction of the machines in many cities that are at present looking for some less unwieldy method of securing an honest vote and a quicker method of reading the returns after the polls are closed.

AMUSING ANECDOTES OF JOE CANTILLON

Are Related in a Magazine Article Under Caption "Why Nobody Loves the Umpire."

In a very interesting article appearing in a recent number of the Saturday Evening Post, Allen Sangree describes the altogether unenviable life led by the average baseball umpire. Ask any professional baseball player his opinion of umpires and you will get an unprintable answer, according to the writer. The player admits, he continues, that their job is unpleasant and difficult, but he has no sympathy or consideration for them. With all the "cuss" words clipped out, this is about what he would say: "There are, and have been, some pretty good umpires. Like Lynch, Sheridan, 'Hank' O'Day and Joe Cantillon, but the majority umpire just the way they feel. If they are in good health and happy, they will stand for a little talk. You can even call them names. But get 'em when they are grouchy and they will put you out of the game for a sideways look. If umpires were the same every day," concludes the professional player, "we should have no trouble with them."

The private life of these men is more secluded than that of the Czar of Russia, declares Sangree, and in support of his declaration he relates a number of mirth-provoking incidents which undoubtedly provoked anything but mirth at the time they occurred. From his lugubrious array of the persecuted, however, it is interesting to note that he departs to make a notable exception of the great baseball man who hailed from Janesville. This is what he says:

Joe Cantillon was the most popular umpire that ever held an indicator. He is a stocky Irishman with a fund of good humor and an eagle eye, and would always give as good as was sent. In fact, he did not wait for the ball player to chaff him; he often made the running himself. One of his most amusing jests was perpetrated in Chicago. Cooley, I believe, was at the bat and Lang in centre field. It was a dark, muggy day. One could hardly see a ball after it got by second base. Cooley slammed a long drive into centre that was lost in the fog, but Cantillon with his eagle eye saw that the ball was caught. He chased around the bases with Cooley just the same, yelling at him: "Don't cut the corners now; be sure and touch that base." Cooley and the spectators thought it was a home run, and the latter were yelling at the top of their lungs. It meant the winning run for Cooley's team, and he ran like a thief. As he approached the home plate Cantillon roared: "Slide, now, slide," and Cooley slid about fifteen feet, only to arise and find the team all going off the field with Lang holding the ball. So deeply to heart does a ball player take the offenses of an umpire that he can hardly ever forgive him, even after he is out of the game. This same Cantillon is very fond of telling a story of Comiskey's rejoinder to him in Chicago some time after the two had had trouble on the field. The "Old Roman" was on the gate when Cantillon approached with a couple of friends. "Is it all right for my friends to go in?" asked Cantillon. The Chicago captain glared for a full minute, and Cantillon began to think that he was going to be turned down. Finally Comiskey, in a voice that could be heard clear to the gatekeeper, said: "Yes, if this man has any friends, let 'em all in; they won't take up much room."

COMING HOME AFTER TWO YEARS' SERVICE

Capt. L. T. Richardson, Who Has Been Waging War on Savage Moros, Leaves Manila Nov. 1.

Captain L. T. Richardson, son of Hon. Hamilton Richardson of this city, who has completed two years' service in the Philippines, will sail from Manila for United States about November 1. He has been stationed on the island of Mindanao which is inhabited by a savage tribe of Moros who still continue to maintain a hostile front to the U. S. army. In a recent engagement of a portion of Capt. Richardson's regiment with the warriors it was necessary to kill every man in one of their strongholds, as no plans of surrender would be entertained by them. It is the Moros' religious belief that if he is killed in battle his soul is transported directly to heaven but that if he is lost, living, he yields to the enemy. Capt. Richardson was accompanied across the Pacific by his wife and two small children, who have been with him in the Philippines during his term of service. After reaching this country he will be stationed for a time in San Francisco with members of the Twenty-second regiment, which accompanies him home. During the winter he will be enabled to make a visit in this city.

WOULD BE GLAD TO ENTERTAIN MEETING

Rev. Tippet Will Probably Be Returned to the Central M. E. Church Again.

The last quarterly conference of the Central M. E. church was held last evening. The annual conference convened at Wausau next week, and resolutions were passed requesting the return of Rev. J. H. Tippet as pastor of the Central church for another year. The request will doubtless be granted.

The society had $22,000 to start with, including the Carrell donation, have raised on subscription $8,500 and will have some $13,000 to raise when the church is dedicated.

The New Building

The building will be commodious and modern in every respect and well adapted to the wants and work of church which has a membership of something more than 600.

DAMAGE TO LEAF FROM HAIL STORM

Of Two Weeks Ago Not as Large as Anticipated—T. A. Ryan's Removal to La Crosse.

Reports that reach the tobacco buyers tend to show that the damage done by the hail-storm two weeks ago is not as large as was at first anticipated. There has been an active trade in old leaf recently as the following transactions show: A. Ryan sold 210 cases of 1901; J. A. Ryan sold 210 cases of 1902-3-4; and T. A. Ryan sold 350 cases of 1902-3-4. By the removal of T. A. Ryan to La Crosse, Janesville has lost one of its prominent leaf dealers. Mr. Ryan has identified himself with the Pamperin Leaf Tobacco Co. of that city which has already put up a large packing of northern leaf and has secured over 300 acres that is yet to be shelled. He carries with him the best wishes of many friends in this city and section of the state.

The Most Beautiful Book About Pianos Ever Printed.

There is a book about pianos, a copy of which may be had by any one who is thinking of buying, which is really a work of art. It is printed in colors and every page displays an original art nouveau border. Besides photographs of twenty leading makes of pianos, it is embellished with portraits of the great composers.

This book throws a flood of light upon the whole piano question, for it explains the difference between real piano bargains and sham piano bargains. It makes clear to any one the necessity of securing musical value when purchasing and shows the folly of buying many of the pianos now so freely offered, which are, in fact, pianos in name only.

Lights Show Prosperity—Why is the Postoffice a Dark Structure?

To the Public: Instead of addressing this letter to the editor I take the liberty of addressing it to the public. Some time ago I asked space in your valuable paper to call attention to the needs of a police telephone system. Evidently the council did not see fit to take my remarks seriously and no telephone system was installed. There is, however, an improvement in the methods of calling the police. One man is in the office most of the time and the men on the streets can be found. This is due to the increased number of police officers and the fact they are uniformed. This uniforming of the officers has been a great thing. It gives citizens means of identification more than the old-fashioned night stick that went out of vogue with the civil war.

Those Lights

So much has been said in the past through your columns by "Old Fogey" and others of the lighting of the post-office. It has evidently been said to empty ears. The front of that beautiful building is like a morgue after dark. Strangers seeking the postoffice after nightfall might as well hunt for the Monterey bridge as find it from the light that is in the neighborhood. Not only is the building exterior dark, but there is no light on the corner itself and the darkness of Egypt was bright sunshine compared to the inky blackness that pervades the government property in this city. Why is this? Is Uncle Sam bankrupt? Or is it the postmaster's fault? Someone is to blame and the public suffers. The interior has been better lighted, but five lights on that stand on the steps are shrouded in darkness. Give us a little "glow." Mister Postmaster, for we all know Uncle Sam is not as pecunious as to shut us off entirely from some sort of a light. If electricity is too costly, it gas would be to expensive, pass around the hat and get an old-fashioned oil lamp and put it out there.

Speaking of Lights

Speaking of lights, just look at the new Carnegie library. Its magnificent approaches, its stately columns, its impressive front, all are bathed with a glow of electricity that makes the casual passerby wonder what the city can be thinking of to expend vast sums for lighting one building. After groping up the street, stumbling and slipping, one is dazzled by the flow of cheerfulness and welcome that greets one at this stately edifice. One can almost hear the electric light company's motors working overtime to supply this vast amount of artificial daylight. If you do not believe this description, go down to the library any evening and see the two little puny lights that decorate the front of this costly structure. They are there even if you cannot see them.

But to Boost

The organization of the Janesville Advancement Association is a good thing. Janesville needs waking up. It has long remained inactive and the handful of crowd of young business men who are at the head of the new association mean business. Let every one help. I am told that the committee soliciting memberships will accept contributions from everyone who is interested in making Janesville a live city. George Washington Stoner, the aged register of deeds of Dane county who came through Janesville in an early day, reports that old man James, the first settler, offered his father the deed to choice lots free of cost if he would only settle here. James was a member of the first Janesville Advancement Association. Even if he did leave a curse on the town in the shape of his name, he started the good work along and now others are following in his footsteps and becoming the city as hard as they can. Keep the good work up. "Boost—do not kick." Every little helps. To make Janesville the city it should be, keep pegging at it. Water dripping on stone wears away the stone in time, so do not become discouraged if the first attempts are not entirely successful.

Signs of Prosperity

Almost as a miracle the streets, the main streets of the city, are being lighted. Brilliant electric signs adorn almost every store of any importance. It makes the city look prosperous. It gives the town a tone. It impresses the traveling public and they in turn tell their friends about Janesville's prosperity. People like to live in a prosperous town. People like to enjoy their neighbors' good fortune. Janesville has some of the finest class of stores, taking it all in all, that any city in the state, outside of Milwaukee, has. Janesville is the center of travel for the southern portion of the state. All Janesville needs is a little boosting. The best sugar factory brings wealth to the farmers and the farmers spend their money where they can get the best results. If they can do it in Janesville they will do so. If they can buy to better advantage at Janesville they will do it. Bring the farm trade to Janesville and you bring money. Bring money and you bring prosperity.

Buy it in Janesville

The Gazette has been printing lines throughout its paper for some time: "Buy it in Janesville." It is a good motto. Buy it in Janesville. Patronize your home merchants. Keep your money at home. By doing so you give employment to more help. By doing this you keep on adding to the prosperity of the merchants and they put in better stocks of goods and give better prices. I am reminded right here of a story of a Janesville merchant who owns a big store visiting Rockford recently. He was inspecting one of the large, if not the largest, dry-goods store in that city. The manager beamed all over as he showed the Janesville merchant his magnificent stock of goods. Finally he reached the lace counter, and stepping behind took down a piece of fine lace, which he carefully unrolled. In a lowered voice he explained the price, some seven or eight dollars a yard, and said pleasantly: "Now, Mr. Blank, if you ever have any call for lace of such a price just let me know and I will ship it up to you at cost!" He was thanked politely by the Janesville merchant. The joke of the affair was that the Janesville merchant carries lace in his stock valued at twice or three times this value, carries lots of it, while this was the highest priced goods the Rockford store has. Buy it in Janesville.

Labor Notes

Twenty-one prominent manufacturers from different parts of the country are named as directors of the National Association of Manufacturers of the United States, which was incorporated at Albany, N. Y., on August 22, for the purpose of "regulating relations between employers and employees and dealing with labor unions." The principal office is in New York.

The promoters of the miners' hospital at Spangler, Pa., for which Gov. Pennypacker voted an appropriation of $10,000, have decided to go ahead with the erection of the building. The cost will be met by the coal operators, the miners and other residents of Spangler and vicinity. It is estimated that the building will represent an outlay of $15,000.

The Industrial Workers of the World, organized recently in Chicago, are growing at a rapid rate.

It is said that President John Mitchell of the United Mine Workers will devote all his time to the upbuilding of the organization in the anthracite region for the balance of the year. It is also reported that the miners are again affiliating themselves with the organization in large numbers.

The Spanish Cabinet has approved a plan to push ahead public work to give employment to many of the famine-stricken workers and relieve the distress in Andalusia.

Save 1899, the year 1905 was the best the Irish sea fisheries have had in the past decade. The number of men in Ireland engaged in sea fishing in 1905 was approximately 25,000 and the number of boats employed was 6,235.

TROUBLE STARTED IN STATE LEAGUE

Failure of Freeport and Beloit to Finish the Season May Mean Complications.

Beloit and Freeport appear to have laid themselves liable to two hundred-dollar fines in the Wisconsin State League by failing to finish the season and play La Crosse and Wausau. Instead of following out their schedule, these two teams are playing a nice little series all by themselves at Freeport, while La Crosse and Wausau are left in the cold. The talk is of another state league for next year. President Powers of the present League is ambitious and would handle two leagues. The towns he chooses for one of them are Appleton, Fond du Lac, Oshkosh, Green Bay, La Crosse, Eau Claire, Wausau and Madison. The scores for yesterday were:

Oshkosh 8, Green Bay 1
Green Bay, Wis., Sept. 16.—Dunton, Green Bay's new pitching find, was exploded by the Indians yesterday, and Boebe was almost invincible. Manager Beckwith had his elbow dislocated just before the game by a fall and was taken to the hospital. Score: R. H. E.
Green Bay 1 0 0 0 0 0 0 0—1 6 3
Oshkosh 0 0 1 0 0 0 0 0—8 9 2
Batteries—Dunton and Connors; Boebe and Moore.

Freeport 1, Beloit 1
Freeport, Ill., Sept. 16.—The Freeport and Beloit teams played twelve innings here yesterday. The game was then called off on account of darkness. The score: R. H. E.
Freeport 0 0 1 0 0 0 0 0 0—1 8 0
Batteries—Hubner and Buckwater; Scott and Reid.

CASE OF TOBIN PUZZLES COURT

MAN ACCUSED OF OUTRAGE MAY BE DERANGED.

WOMAN'S STORY INCOHERENT

And Confused In Some Particulars, and It Is Feared It Would Not Be of Sufficient Weight to Convict.

So very peculiar are the circumstances pertaining to the outrage alleged to have been committed Thursday night by one William Tobin, of whom Mrs. Anderson, residing on North Franklin street, opposite the Marzani factory, complains, that the court and prosecuting attorney were unable to reach any decision this morning as to what ought to be done with the case. On the pretense of making a friendly call, Tobin visited the house of Mrs. Anderson on the night in question. She is a widow of about fifty years of age and has a family of several grown-up children, none of whom were at home. In offering resistance to her assailant she claims that she was terribly bruised and that he gripped her mouth with one hand to smother her screams. There is a black and blue mark over one of her eyes.

Tobin, who is a man of about thirty years, a laborer with no steady employment, an importation from Watertown who is regarded by all who know him as a rather stupid fellow, is said to have admitted about everything except that there were any screams to stifle or any bruises inflicted, when questioned by the police last evening. His home is also on North Franklin street and he is said to have posed as a detective. Mrs. Anderson is said not to have always been mentally sound. According to what purports to be information regarding her, which has reached the district attorney, she has been treated in an insane asylum.

As to His Sanity
It is possible that the charge on which Tobin was arrested will be dismissed and a lesser one substituted or that he be taken before Judge Sale and examined as to his sanity. Should the man stand trial on the first charge preferred against him the rather incoherent and confused testimony of the complainant, unsupported by other witnesses, would scarcely be of sufficient weight to convict, it is feared. And unless the prisoner is a madman he would hardly plead guilty to a crime which would land him, convicted, in prison for a long term of years.

Will Be Examined
An order calling for the examination of Tobin's mental condition was issued by County Judge Sale this afternoon. His case will probably not be disposed of there until Monday.

Mistaken Identity: Last night a watchman containing valuable property was stolen at Madison by a colored man. The grip was recovered but the thief escaped and the officers telephoned descriptions to neighboring towns. It was immediately discovered that this colored man wore a mustache while the one described was a clean shaven. He said he had come here looking for work as a janitor and was released without further question.

Tennyson Loved the Ivy.
It is, of course, the poets who have mostly celebrated the charms of individual flowers, while a few of them have had favorites which might be regarded as unusual. When asked by Hans Christian Andersen to tell him in truth his favorite plant, Tennyson answered: "It is the ivy. It needs no nourishing; it knows neither heat nor cold; it is the plant of immortality."

"UNDER SOUTHER SKIES," AT MYERS'

The Play Has Suffered Little Since Seen Here Last Season.

Returning to the Grand yesterday for afternoon and evening performances, "Under Southern Skies," the beautiful southern play which appeared here last season, was greeted with fair-sized audiences. Though some changes have been made in the cast the play has suffered but little, if any. It is a most absorbing piece and depicts southern life on a Louisiana plantation. Miss Laura Oakman as "Lelia Crofton," the center of interest, ably handles the difficult role she takes. Miss Kate Sanford Wylie as "Aunt Dosty," the old colored servant, and Miss Gussie Luria as "Anner Liza," the little colored character whose humor brightens the play, were both excellent in their respective parts. The rest of the cast is well balanced, those entitled to special notice being Harry DeForest as "Col. Edward Crofton," Leona Westford as "Bessie Linton," Harry Linson as "Col. Paul Daubeno," and Wm. W. Blair as "Steve Daubeno." The dancing and singing of the six negro servants in the Hallowe'en party scene in act two was very good, the participants being forced to respond with five encores. The play is a favorite and promises to bring its author, Lotie Blair Parker, almost as much notoriety as did "Way Down East."

FINALS IN THE DU PONT TROPHY

Failed to Settle Question as to Who Should Have Cup—Carpenter and McVicar Tied.

In the final shoot for the Du Pont cup, held at Athletic Park under the auspices of the Janesville Gun Club yesterday afternoon, Henry Carpenter and J. H. McVicar tied for the high gun, each breaking 46 out of 50 birds. There was a disputed decision, however, regarding an alleged broken bird which was thrown from the trap for McVicar and which he claimed Empire Roy Peterson should have called "no bird." The matter will be taken up by the Du Pont Powder Co., which offers the cup. If their decision is unfavorable to the protestant a final match will be arranged between the two competitors. Otherwise the trophy is his. The cup is to be awarded for matches won, not for the total scores. In the four previous contests Henry Carpenter, Joseph Echlin, J. H. McVicar, and Frank Casey each held the high gun once. The record of the shooters during the five matches is shown in the following tabulated figures:

View of Work on Sewers on North River St.

The above view is one that greets the average citizen's eye on North River street. It was in a spot similar to this that the horse fell into the ditch on Thursday and was pulled out by a burly man who was working on the job. The work is being rushed rapidly and will soon be completed.

JANESVILLE HORSE IN SECOND PLACE

Charley Howe, Owned by Charles
Schaller, Was Second at Monros Yesterday.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Monroe, Sept. 15.—The second day of the Green county fair was an ideal one and the attendance was most excellent. The races as usual, were the magnet that attracted the crowd. There were three races on the program for the afternoon's sport. The feature race was the 2:23 pace, which proved a hard-fought battle of six stubbornly contested heats. The Janesville horse, "Charley Howe," owned by Chas. Schaller, paced a splendid race and had the judges declared the race on its true merits. "Charley Howe" would have been awarded the race. The starter as usual did most excellent work, but the judges were very inefficient. In the second heat, won by "Charley" in 2:19 1/4, two horses were distanced, but were permitted to start in the third. In the third heat, won by "Charley," in 2:19 1/4, Count Buckner was shut out, but the judges permitted him to start in the fourth heat. "Howe," when well in the lead, from some cause made a bad tangled break and fell badly to the rear, but after recovering his driver with bad judgment drove for the heat; he passed all of the horses but Count Buckner, who had a few feet further to go he would have also beaten. The extreme effort to win after his bad break destroyed all chance of future victory. Simply the same old story of a fairly distanced horse winning a race he was not entitled to. Had Count Buckner been sent to the stable where he should have been after being distanced the race would have been awarded to "Charley Howe," to whom under an legitimate rules of racing he was entitled to. Saturday being the last day, an immense crowd is expected, as Saturday is the big turn-out day here.

JANESVILLE GIRL IS ILL AT APPLETON

Lawrence, Was Taken Seriously Ill Last Evening.

Dispatches from Appleton announce that Miss Mabel Charlton, daughter of George D. Charlton, a stock buyer living at 107 South High street, and a student at Lawrence university in Appleton, was attacked with convulsions last night, and is in a serious condition at Ormsby Hall. Miss Charlton is said to have suffered from homesickness, which brought on the attack.

THIRTY MINUTES TO LEAVE JANESVILLE

If the Vagabond Albert Dorsey Ever
Comes Back, a 60 Day Jail
Sentence Awaits Him.

Albert Dorsey was given 30 minutes to get outside of the city limits this morning and if he ever comes back a sixty-day sentence in the county jail will be his portion. "He is a natural thief, a vagabond, and a drunkard," said Chief Constable to the court this morning. The youth has repeatedly been before the court on one charge or another. Not long ago he broke some windows on River street during a drunken spree. When arrested last night he was reported to be trying to dispose of a handful of razors. He had a package of mail in his pockets which he claimed to have found on the streets of Beloit. Judge Pfeiffer gave him sixty days and then suspended sentence while the youth presumably dined for the neighboring farms.

The program committee of the first-named organization, consisting of George Sutherland, W. S. Jeffris, Frank Jackman, Judge Charles Pfeiffer and Rev. R. C. Denison, has not yet chosen the subjects for the programs. Uses of Lemon Water.
Not only is the drink of lemon water an excellent liver corrective, but if taken in hot water instead of cold it will prove a very efficacious anti-tar remedy. It is better than any drug or complexion powder for giving permanent clearness and beauty to the skin.

UNLAWFUL ANGLERS AT LAKE KOSHKONONG

Are Doing a Land-Office Business
According to Warden Drafiak—C. H.
Bsach Fined for Hunting Ducks.

C. H. Beach of the town of Beloit, against whom an action for pursuing ducks with a gun during the closed season last March has been on the docket for several months, was accompanied to municipal court this morning by Deputy Game-Warden Peter Drafiak. On his plea of guilty Judge Pfeiffer imposed a sentence of a fine of $20 and costs or twenty days in jail but on recommendation of the warden the fine was remitted on payment of costs and the retention by the state of the confiscated property consisting of one shotgun worth more than ten dollars. Beach has a good reputation and did not actually succeed in killing any of the game. "Violations of the game-laws are in progress on the southwestern part of Lake Koshkonong on a larger scale than ever before attempted," said the game-warden this morning. "One only has to take notice of the number of fresh fish offered on the Janesville market and openly advertised as Lake Koshkonong product, to reach this conclusion. Such quantities were never caught by the simple, old-fashioned single hook and line method. On Tuesday I took out a set-line 80 rods long, armed with 500 hooks and fishweighted down with 200 pounds of fish. These illegal fishermen were foxy. They have their outposts where a constant watch is maintained. But they will be gathered in one of these days and there won't be any remission of fines either."

George Scargiff will shortly relinquish his present position in the Nash store to travel on the road.

CRY OF FRAUD IN TOWN OF TURTLE

John Patrick and William Thuesen
Say School Was Closed Against
Will of Majority.

John Patrick and William Thuesen of school district nine, township of Turtle, who are in Janesville today consulting with Attorney John Cunningham, make grave charges regarding the conduct of the annual school meeting which was held on July 2. It will be recalled that on July 12 there appeared in the Gazette a notice signed by Matt F. Fathers, director, C. W. Shimeall, treasurer, and M. N. Whalen, clerk; announcing that by a vote of 21 to 17 the qualified voters at the said annual school meeting had decided in favor of the suspension of the school in district nine until the next meeting of the board in July, 1906. Messrs. Patrick and Thuesen declare that this reported result is false—that only 22 voted and that 19 of these were in favor of retaining the school and 14 opposed to it. They claim they can produce the nineteen voters. Coupled with their allegation that the returns were deliberately falsified is another to the effect that the board was determined to divide the district in the fact of the opposition of a majority and that being unable to accomplish this they determined to close the school whether the people would it or no. There are sixteen children ready to go to school and denied the privilege according to the two visitors and they are going to make a determined effort to have the alleged crooked business straightened out and the deserted building reopened.

THE YOE

A Romance of the Days When the Lord Redeemed the Children of Israel From the Bondage of Egypt

By Elizabeth Miller

Copyright, 1904, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

He shook his head, smiling. "I did but test the harmony of the strings. Harmony is grateful to mine ear."

"Meas' lips twitched. 'If harmony is here,' he said, 'with meaning, you will find it in the instrument.'"

Again a voice from the general conversation broke in, this time from Ramesses.

"Kenekenes hath outlasted an army of other singers. I know him as such when mine uncles yet lived and my father was many moves from the throne. It was while we dwelt untravelling here in Memphis. They made thee sing in the temple, Kenekenes. Dost thou remember?"

"Age," Tauser took it up. "They made thee sing in the temple, and it went sore against thee, Kenekenes. Most of the upper classes in the college here were hoarse or treble by turns, and the priests required thee by force from thy tutors because thou couldst sing. Thou wert a stubborn lad, as pretty as a minnow and as surly as a caged lion. I can see thee now chanting, with a voice like a lark, and frowning like a very demon from Amenti!"

The princess laughed merrily at her own narration and received the applause of the others with a serene countenance.

"Art still as reluctant, Kenekenes?" the Lady Sencl called to him.

The hesitation between Sencl's invitation and his answer was not noticeable. He put the instrument out of his reach, tossing it on a cushion a little distance away.

"Not so reluctant," he said, turning his face toward the lady, "as unready."

"Sing for us, Kenekenes!"

I have exhausted my store of songs for this selfsame company, wherefore they will not listen to reiteration, which is ever insipid."

Spitah buried his chin in his hand in a cushion on the floor near him.

"O thou paternal prince," he said, "repeat us a prayer of exorcism as a father should, and rid us of our fears of Moses the Jew."

"Mine exorcism of the Hebrew sorcerer Moses will be harsher than formulas. I shall not beseech the Israelites, and it will avail them naught to beseech me."

"Thou art ominous, light of Egypt," Kenekenes commented quickly. "Wilt thou open the heart further and give us thy meaning?"

"Hast lived out of the world, O son of Meut? The exorcism will begin ere long. In this I give thee the history of Israel for the next few years and close it. I shall not fall heir to the Hebrews when I come to wear the crown of Egypt."

"Are they to be sent forth?" Kenekenes asked in a low tone.

Ramesses laughed shortly.

"Thou art not versed in the innuendoes of court talk, my Kenekenes. Nay, they die in Egypt and fertilize the soil."

"It will raise a Set-given uproar, Ramesses," Meas' broke in, with meek conviction, "and, as thou hast said, to the king the credit, to his advisers the blame."

"Nay; the process is longer and more natural," the prince replied carelessly. "It is but the same method of the mines. Who can call death by hard labor murder?"

The full brutality of the prince's meaning struck home. Kenekenes gripped the arm of Tauser's chair with such power that the sinews stood up rigid and white above the back of the brown hand. Luckily all of the guests were contemplating Ramesses with more or less horror. They did not see the color redden from the young artist's face or his eyes glinted dangerously.

Masanath sat up very straight and leveled a pair of eyes shining with accusation at the prince.

"Of a truth, was thine the flat?" she demanded.

"Even so, thou lovely mazerate," he answered, with an amused smile. "Was it not a masterful one?"

Hotep delivered her a warning glance, but she did not heed it. Austere Ma, the defender of truth, could have been as easily crushed.

"Masterful!" she cried. "Nay! Meas' lend me thy word. Of all Set-given, pitiless, atrocious edicts that is the cruelest! Shame on thee!"

At her first words Ramesses raised himself from his attitude of languor into an upright and intensely alert position. The company ceased to breathe, but Kenekenes heaved a soundless sigh of relief. Masanath had uttered his denunciations for him.

Meanwhile the prince's eyes began to sparkle, a rich stain grew in his cheeks, and when she made an end he was the picture of animated delight. For the first time in his life he had been defied and condemned.

But his gaze did not disturb Masanath. Her eyes dared him to resent her censure. The prince had no such purpose in mind.

"Oh, by Besa! Here is what I have sought for so long!" he exclaimed at last. "Hither, thou treasure, thou dear, defiant little shrew! Thou art more to me than all the wealth of Pithom. Hither, I tell thee!"

But she did not move. The company was breathing with considerable relief by this time, but not a few of them were casting furtive glances at Tauser.

"Hither!" Ramesses commanded, stamping his foot. "Nay, I had forgot she denies my power. Behold, then, I come to thee."

Masanath anticipated his intent, and, rising with much dignity, she put the ivory throne between her and the prince. Cool and self-possessed, she gathered up her lotuses, as fresh after an evening in her hand as they were when the slaves gathered them from the Nile, found her fun and made other serene preparations to depart. Ramesses, fended from her by the chair, stood before her and watched with a smile in his eyes.

Presently he waved his hand to the other guests.

"Arise, the princess is going," he commanded.

In the sur and rustle, laughter and talk of the guests getting up at the prince's sign—for it was customary to permit the highest of rank to dismiss a company—Masanath slipped from among them and attempted to leave unnoticed. But Ramesses was before her and had taken possession of her hand before she could elude him. As Kenekenes passed them on his way to the door her soft shoulders were squared; she had drawn herself as far away from the prince as she might and was otherwise evincing her discomfort extravagantly.

Before them was Hotep, outwardly undisturbed, smiling and complacent. At one side was Tauser, at the other, Seti, and to him on Hotep's arm.

The young artist walked past them hurriedly, moved to leave all the ferment and agitation behind him. If he had thought to forget his sorrows among the light-hearted revels of this that did not sorrow, he misdirected his search.

At the doors the Lady Sencl met him and drew him over to the diphros, now vacated by Keltis.

And there she took his face between her hands and kissed him.

"Hail, thou son of the royal architect!" she said.

"Having much, I am given more," he responded. "Behold the prodigality of good fortune. The fathoms exalt me in the world and add thereto a kiss from the Lady Sencl."

"I was impelled truly," she confessed, "but by thine own face as well as by the fathoms. Kenekenes, if I did not know thee I should say thou wast pretending—thou, to whom pretense is impossible."

He did not answer, for there was no desire in his heart to tell his secret, yet the unusual winsomeness of his father's noble love was hard to resist.

"Thy manner this evening betrays thee as striving to hide one spirit and show another," she continued, seeing he made no response.

"What a tattling face is mine!" he said. "Is her name written there?" He drew his fingers across his forehead.

"No need. I have been young, and many are the young that have wooed and wed beneath mine eyes. I know the signs."

Again she kissed him and let him go. In the corridor without he received his mantle and kerchief from a servant and continued toward the outer portals, but before he reached them Tauser stepped out of a cross corridor and halted. Never before did her eyes so shine or her smile so flash within the cloud of gauzes that mantled and covered her.

"Kenekenes, thou hast given me no opportunity to wish thee well as the son of the royal architect. Most heartily I give thee joy!"

Kenekenes kissed her hand. "And wilt thou say that to Nechutes and put him in the highest heaven?"

"Already have I wished him well," she responded, pretending to pout, "but he repaid me poorly."

"Nay! What did he?"

"Beggared me to become his wife."

"And, having given him the span, thou didst yield him the cubit also when he asked it?" he surmised.

"Nay, not yet. But—shall I?" She lifted her face and looked at him, smiling and bewitchingly beautiful.

"Do not play with him, Tauser. He is worthy and loves thee most tenderly. Thou lovest him. Be kind to thine own heart and put him to the rack no more. He comes yonder," Kenekenes added in a whisper, "poor, woody boy! Go back to him and take him all the happiness I would to the gods I knew, Farwell."

He pressed her hand and continued toward the door.

Once again he was halted, this time by Ramesses. Nechutes and Tauser had disappeared.

"One other thing I would tell thee, Kenekenes," the prince said. "The Pharaoh heard a song to the sunrise on the Nile some time ago, and I identified the voice for him. He would have thee sing for him, Kenekenes."

"The Pharaoh's wish is law," was the slow answer.

"Oh, it was not a command," Ramesses replied softly, for he was still holding Masanath's hand and therefore in high good humor with himself. "In truth, he said the choice should be thine whether thou wilt or not. But more of this later; the gods go with thee."

Kenekenes bowed and escaped.

In his room a few moments later he lighted his lamp of scented oils and contemplated the comforts about him. His conscience pointed a condemning finger at him. He did not sleep. He tossed and counted the hours.

"Sing for the Pharaoh!" he exclaimed. "Aye, I will sing till the throat of me cracks, not for the reward of his good will alone, but for Rachel's liberty—that first and the unraveling of this puzzle thereafter."

BISHOP DEFENDS ROCKEFELLER

Michigan City, Ind., Sept. 16.—"Tainted money" entered into the discussion in the northwest Indiana Methodist conference, in which Bishop Charles Fowler of New York went on record as approving the donation of money by John D. Rockefeller for the erection of churches. The debate was occasioned by the request for approval by the conference of a plan to appeal to Rockefeller for aid to erect a church and parsonage at Whiting, Ind., where one of the largest of the Standard Oil company's refineries is located. After the debate reached fever heat, Bishop Fowler startled the conference by saying: "If Mr. Rockefeller should give me money for church purposes I would snap it up so quickly that it would make his head swim." The bishop added that Mr. Rockefeller had given more money than any other man to the cause of Christianity, and said that "the charges against him are principally moonshine."
